William See born in Childers Qld .At the age of 25 years and 4 months, a farmer , he enlisted in the AIF in Brisbane on the 8th January 1916 and was given the Service Number 1745, being initially enlisted in the 15th Battalion of the 4th Brigade.

After initial training probably at Chermside in Brisbane he and his brother Thomas who had enrolled at the same time embarked from Sydney, New South Wales on board SS Hawkes Bay on 20 April 1916 bound for the battlefields of France and Belgium.

Disembarking at Alexandria and Suez first on the 27th May 1916 and then finally Plymouth in England ,he proceeded to France on the 15th September 1916 arriving in Etaples where he was absorbed into the 52nd Battalion and joined his unit on the 30th September 1916.

The Battalion was trained behind the front line near Abbeville in Northern France near Amiens. This was near the coast and where the Australian Battalions first arrived before being sent elsewhere. Etaples was the probable landing place in France.

They were engaged in their first real battles at Poziers and Mouquet farm on the Somme in April 1916.

The 52nd Battalion was raised at Tel el Kebir in Egypt on 1 March 1916 as part of the "doubling" of the AIF. Approximately half of its recruits were veterans from the 12th Battalion, and the other half, fresh reinforcements from Australia. The 52nd became part of the 13th Brigade of the 4th Australian Division.

After arriving in France on 11 June 1916, the 52nd fought in its first major battle at Mouquet Farm on 3 September. It had been present during an earlier attack mounted by the 13th Brigade between 13 and 15 August, but had been allocated a support role and missed the fighting. In this second attack the 52nd had a key assaulting role and suffered heavy casualties- 50 per cent of its fighting strength. The battalion saw out the rest of the year alternating between front line duty, and training and labouring behind the line. This routine continued through the bleak winter of 1916-17.

From November through December the battalion was based around St Vas, Buire and Vignacourt in support roles and Flers on the front line on the Somme.

(During late December and early January 1916-1917 for about 2 -3 weeks the battalion was rested and based in Vignacourt in Picardy . This is when the photographs were taken by the Thuilliers.)

In early January 1917, while on the front line at Flers he contracted mumps and spent time in clearing stations and field hospitals at Abbeville and Rouen before rejoining his Battalion on the 13th February 1917. He was wounded in the field around the 7th April 1917 , spent time in a clearing station with a compound fracture it appears and on the 24th April he was transferred to St Andrews hospital in England via Boulogne. On the 6th July after convalescing he was transferred to the base depot at Weymouth in Dartford, England and joined the overseas training brigade at Sandhill Camp. Finally in late November 1917 he rejoined his unit in France. He was again in training behind the lines and in reinforcement as required around Abbeville.

In early February 1918 he reported sick to hospital again but returned to the field in late February.

The Battalion was on the front lines on the Salient near to Ypres in Belgium for most of March. They also were involved in action around the Hill 60 and Ridgewood Camp area known for its huge mine detonations.

In April the battalion once again moved back to the Somme around Dernancourt and Buire for action on the front as the Germans mustered one final advancement on the Hindenburg Line. They would rest in Corbie and Bonnavy not far from the front.

In April William would be part of the Australian offensive around Villers Bretonneux. Here he was wounded again on the 25th April 1918 during the Australian advances .

The plan to recapture Villers–Bretonneux was relatively simple, but difficult and dangerous. The Germans had been able to place a significant number of men and machine guns in the town and along the railway embankment to the south and west. Strong enemy elements had also established themselves in the woods to the west of the town. The Australian plan was for a surprise night attack, with no preliminary artillery bombardment. Two battalions (the 51st and 52nd Battalions, about 1,500 men) of the 13th Brigade, 4th Division, would attack to the south of Villers–Bretonneux towards the east. Three battalions (the 57th, 59th and 60th Battalions, about 2,400 men) of the 15th Brigade, 5th Division, would similarly attack from the north of the town towards the east and then swing south–east to the old Roman road heading out of Villers–Bretonneux. Thus would the Germans be encircled and trapped.

“Much of this ‘swish and patter’ was from enemy machine guns in the Bois d’Aquerne (Aquerne Wood) to their left. This obstacle was overcome in a most dramatic manner by Sergeant Charlie Stokes, and Lieutenant Clifford Sadlier, both of Subiaco, Western Australia, and the 51st Battalion, who realised that further advance meant annihilation for their unit unless the machine gunners were silenced. Together they assaulted the Germans with grenades and, although Sadlier was badly wounded, he and his men destroyed the enemy guns. Despite taking heavy casualties the two battalions swept on towards their objectives.

And so by the morning of 25 April 1918 the men of the AIF, with some assistance by British units, had virtually surrounded Villers–Bretonneux. It took the rest of that day and into 26 April to completely secure the town and to establish a new front line east of it. This, the Second Battle of Villers–Bretonneux, had been a remarkable achievement and a clear-cut success for the AIF. It marked the end of the great German offensive on the Somme which had begun so successfully on 21 March 1918 and, as the historian of the 5th Division concluded, ‘Thereafter, no German ever set foot in Villers–Bretonneux save as a prisoner of war.’” -Source AWM

With gunshot wounds to his both legs William was admitted to the General Hospital in Rouen and finally transferred to England again to the 3rd Auxilliary hospital in Dartford in mid May 1918 to once again convalesce.

Transferred to a training battalion in September 1918 he returned to France on the 29th September 1918 and spent time with the remains of the 15th Battalion. It was here in the field that he heard news of the Armistice .

His service continued until an ulcer to his left leg forced him again into hospital in early 1919 finally returning to England.

Departing on the troop ship Medic on the 31st May 1919 he left Europe and disembarked on the 1st November 1919 in Australia...home at last.

He had arrived in France at the beginning of the Australian involvement in 1916, had taken part in many important battles of the Great War and had survived to return home.
